ICES is the central space for interdisciplinary research on Europe at Europa-Universität Flensburg. European integration is a complex process that continuously shapes society, politics and culture. The goal of ICES is to identify and research these processes from the perspectives of the social sciences and the humanities. Cutting across all EUF institutes and disciplines, ICES' setup naturally works to foster interdisciplinary exchange and research.

As the central point of contact for questions concerning European research for science, politics and civil society, ICES is devoted to supporting three areas:

1. Research funding: We accompany our members from the project idea to the finished grant application and support them in project administration.
2. Networking: We are happy to support our members in establishing and expanding cooperation with partners from academia and practice. In this sense, we are also the contact for representatives from politics, business and society.
3. Promotion of early-stage researchers: We look for suitable funding opportunities for the realisation of doctoral projects and create qualification opportunities for young scientists, on an individual case by case basis.

At ICES, EUF researchers are networked across disciplines, institutes and universities. This enables us to work at an interdisciplinary level and thus to develop new explanatory approaches and innovative proposals.

Further information on the mandate, objectives and structure of ICES can be found in our statutes.
