Description

The Academic Literacy and English course is for students who have a mid B2 or higher level of English. The course is designed to improve English skills in the context of the university and higher education. Emphasis is placed on academic reading skills and writing skills. Participants will develop their academic vocabulary and academic voice in oral and written language.

The course is taught using a content based instruction method built around a single theme for the semester. This semester the theme is 'Populism'. Together we will read and discuss selective readings, write short essays and response papers, and present a small research project. Your academic English skills will improve as well as your general English abilities.

Description

Target Group:

English Literature Short Stories C1/C2 is an English course for students at the C1-C2 level who want to strengthen and expand their English reading comprehension, writing, and speaking/discussion skills. The course uses classic and contemporary short stories as an object of analysis for written and oral communication activities.

Course content:

The focus of this course is on advanced English language skills. Particular attention is paid to reading comprehension, critical thinking, and analytical writing and discussion. You will gain cultural knowledge, how the English language is used to produce 'literary' texts, and how to use the English language appropriately in an academic context.

Regular and active participation is required for successful completion of the course. This includes the completion of homework assignments in order to continue practicing and consolidating what has been learned in the classroom. Attendance is compulsory.

Assessment:

There will be a short written analysis due at the end of the semester. Students will be responsible for presenting information orally throughout the semester.

Literature

Short stories will be made available by the instructor.
