Autumn 2019
Prof. Dr. Ulrich Glassmann
Comparative Institutional Analysis

BA-Lecture (Topics in Area Studies)
Title: Institutional Change of Capitalist Economies & Societies
Time: Tuesdays, weekly, 10.00-12.00am
Venue: MAD 225, Start: 17.09.2019

Course Description: The lecture deals with the institutional configurations which emerged in the course of the development of modern capitalism. It focuses on significant historical transformations by which the formal and informal societal and economic rules of the Western World have been fundamentally altered. At the same time the lecture deepens the knowledge of students with regard to the “Mediterranean Economies” and discusses the current crisis which most of these economies currently experience.

In chronological order, we will look at specific institutional arrangements regulating capitalist production and trade, such as the introduction and abolition of the gold standard, the conflictual establishment of labour union representation, the creation of the methods of mass production as well as the techniques influencing the support for mass consumption. Moreover, we look at institutional reforms designed to deal with specific crisis events such as the Great Crash of 1929, the Oil Price Crisis of the 1970s or the contemporary financial and debt crisis in the Eurozone countries. Here we will focus especially on Southern Europe.

While the lecture discusses specific historical events, it also introduces to significant political and economic theories which have interpreted these events and established a specific perspective in Political Economy. For instance, we will inquire into the various perspectives of economic liberalism as well as the criticism that was voiced against liberal theories, especially in Germany. This approach is supposed to help students to understand the time-sensitivity of economic concepts and enable them to engage in a critical debate on the institutional designs of modern capitalism.

Formal requirements: For the successful completion of this class students need to attend from beginning to end and prepare the literature for each session. At the end of the lecture students will participate in an oral exam (30 minutes) on 3 topics of the lecture. Logistics and the specifics of the formal requirements will be discussed in the first session.

Qualification objectives: The aim of this lecture is to make students acquainted with the historical evolution of economic concepts and deepen their understanding for the development and change of institutional arrangements governing modern capitalism. Students will learn about the cultural differences of these governance structures and will be enabled to understand time-sensitive interpretations of economic policies. Thus, the lecture presents a critical view on dogmatism in economics and approaches which ignore the historical and cultural context of economic activity.

Literature: The literature will be made available on Moodle and has to be prepared for each session.
Session 1) (17.09.2017): Organisation of the Lecture and Logistics Session 2) Why are economic theories dependent on historical context?

Session 3) The Economic Institutions of “The Hundred Years’ Peace” since 1815 and the Rising Opposition between Liberalism and Socialism

Session 4) Antiliberalism und the War Economy During World War One Session 5) From War Propaganda to Psychological Theories of Public Relations and Mass Consumption in the 1920s

Session 6) The Great Depression in the 1930s and “The Road to Serfdom”

Session 7) Economic Institutions of Post-War Europe between 1945 – 1970

Session 8) The Crisis of Mass Production and the Institutional Regulation of Inflation and Unemployment during the 1970s

Session 9) The Deregulation of Financial Markets, the Power of Corporations and Neoliberalism from the 1980s to the present Sitzung 10) Varieties of Capitalism: Coexistence or Antagonism between Liberal and Coordinated Market Economies in the European Union?

Session 11) Regional Varieties of Capitalism in Southern Europe

Session 13) The Crisis of Democratic Capitalism: Public and Private Debt from the Perspective of New Crisis Theories