Course aim	In this module, basic knowledge of aesthetic education and textile communication as well as basic design knowledge and practical design skills are to be acquired, reflected upon, presented and applied in an exemplary manner to subject-specific and practice-oriented content in the areas of textile surfaces and forms. Basic scientific and practical design problems must be analysed and discussed. Among the basic requirements: knowledge and application of basic scientific terms and concepts; ability to analyse aesthetic processes; initial development of textile science issues (in the context of biography, socialisation and fashion theory); basic skills in techniques of textile surface and shape design (e.g. textile techniques of surface formation such as felting, weaving, knitting; textile techniques for surface design such as dyeing, printing, fabric painting, reservation, embroidery and simple cut development for clothing and its craft production) combined with problem awareness for design processes (perceptual competence); development of concepts for presenting textile objects Aims: To test elementary knowledge research in the fields of textile, fashion, design and everyday culture; to make literature research and scientific reading more effective; to experience and reflect both experimental-aesthetic and social-cognitive learning strategies. Test self-biographical analyses as an aspect of scientific discourses; independent and self-directed practical work; acquire subject-oriented forms of communication, action and presentation; expand ability for group work and cooperation.
