

Brief information for the teacher regarding the individual stations

The students have to work together in pairs.

The worksheets for the different learning stations should be placed on the teacher's desk – or any free area.

The students begin with the first station and work their way through the different stations in order. They work on their worksheet from their own places and when they have finished they get up independently to pick up the next worksheet from the teacher's desk.

The primary focus of this work is that the students work both independently and in a team to learn more about the Wadden Sea. This can be extended/complemented by the 'book of assignments'.

Checking-up on students' knowledge should be done at the end of the teaching unit in plenum. Ideas regarding the protective measures should be collected, talked about and if necessary completed.
