

6. ZeBUSS WINTER SCHOOL 26. & 28. Februar 2024

Academic English Writing

Lecturer: Jonathan Mole

Writing an academic text is a complex task. It requires the knowledge of a range of accepted writing conventions, as well as the ability to construct sentences which are not only idiomatically and grammatically correct but also suitably connected to one another. An awareness of the requirements and a degree of practice are necessary.

This workshop is aimed at people who are in the process of writing an academic text in English, such as a proposal, journal article or thesis. It provides the opportunity to obtain individual feedback on an extract of text (1-2 pages, until 15.02.2024) which you submit two weeks prior to the workshop. In the workshop, your text can be discussed, and assistance will be given to support the self-correction of issues relating to structure, understanding, logic, language etc. If required, an overview of the important characteristics of academic English writing can be provided together with a source of relevant reference material.

Following the workshop, continued support will be available either in writing sessions or individual consultations.
